Corner Grocer Wants Full Rationing at Once

By Louise Mitchell

The corner grocer and his customers want rationing now.

Small retailers everywhere are reporting that sugar rationing functions smoothly and it is the least of their worries.

But the matter of coffee has both grocer and housewife aroused.

Yesterday the Wall Street Journal reported that small retailers "hope for rationing."

They are urging that coffee be "rationed quickly." The Journal notes that the sudden shortage of coffee "has been driving grocery store managers frantic."

Grocers and customers alike realize that for the duration there will be a shortage of certain goods. They accept this responsibility proudly. But the small retailer is looking forward to some solution of the problem of stretching available supplies of a growing list of shortage items. Small grocers seem unwilling to release their depleted stocks in the "first come, first served" manner. They are trying to satisfy regular customers in the fairest way possible.

WANT OPA ACTION

Quick action by the Office of Price Administration in rationing all foodstuffs threatened with shortages, is urged by retailers.

The Journal points out that in the interim, grocers are working out their own methods of disposing of depleted stocks. A national survey found that:

Cincinnati stores advertise and urge customers to buy foods that are plentiful like dairy and bakery goods.

A chain store manager in Pennsylvania is reported writing down the names of coffee purchasers in order to "distribute available supplies equitably."

One Washington grocer explains: "We appeal to the customer's patriotism." Another tells his patrons that "it isn't patriotic to buy a lot of something when there isn't enough to go around."

Many grocers are fighting against coffee hoarding by warning that coffee is apt to get stale quickly.

PLENTY OF FOOD

The survey showed that there is plenty of food for civilians but that the time has come when housewives must make up their daily shopping lists from what is in the grocery shelf.

Retail merchants associations throughout the country have already asked OPA for coffee rationing.

The time has also come for real action on the rationing front.

Hodson Report on Child Care Reveals Need for Quick Action

By Ann Rivington

An alarming picture of the need for child care in New York City was presented in a report by Welfare Commissioner William Hodson, made public by Mayor LaGuardia Wednesday afternoon.

The report gave the first indication that plans for real action on the problem are at least being considered in official circles.

Publication of the report coincided with an announcement by the Mayor that he has appointed a broad committee, including representatives of labor and of private welfare agencies, to "coordinate effort and planning" in behalf of the city's children.

Welfare Commissioner Hodson will be chairman of the new committee, and Dr. Alice V. Kellner, chairman of the Child Care, Protection and Development Division of the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, will be its secretary.

Commissioner Hodson's report to the Mayor, while cautiously phrased, indicated that the need for child care in New York City is probably greater even than in some recognized "def-mak areas."

"Six months from now we shall be faced with a very serious problem," the Commissioner stated.

He gave figures from the U. S. Employment Service showing that in April, 1940, the proportion of women workers in New York City was greater than the proportion throughout the country as a whole. At that time, 34 per cent of the Francisco has wired President Roosevelt to dismiss the retired admiral who told the Investment Bankers Assn. last Monday that "organizers ought to be shot."

A thousand New York seamen have also signed this demand in a rank-and-file petition, which a delegation will deliver to the White House in person.

And Friday night and yesterday some 30 seamen speakers were applauded by shore workers at meetings in Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens as they called for Land's dismissal.

SEAMEN KNOW THEIR FOE

The men who "keep 'em sailing" against Hitler know a defeatist when they see him.

Yesterday Archie Gibbs, who spent four days as a prisoner in a Nazi submarine, after being torpedoed last summer, was saying what every seamen felt.

"What made us most angry," he told this reporter in the lobby of the National Maritime Union building on West 17 St., "is Land's defeatist attitude towards the Nazi enemy."

"Land told the Investment Bankers meeting that the seas can't be beaten."

"That isn't true. The merchant seamen beat the subs in the last war and they'll beat them in this one with the help of the Navy."

"They'll beat the subs faster."

Unions Say: Remove Land!

The popular storm against Admiral Emory S. Land, who told the Investment Bankers Monday that organizers "for the duration ought to be shot at sunrise," rose higher yesterday as more unions called for Land's removal as chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission, a key war agency.

Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, wired an invitation to eight other marine unions to hold an emergency national conference about the menace of the labor-shooting admiral.

Meanwhile the "shooting admiral" stuck to his guns.

According to the United Press yesterday in a statement intended to "clarify" his quoted speech.

German and Italian refugees also drew the parallel between Land's "shooting" talk with the acts of Hitler and Mussolini.

HITLER AND LAND

Germans told how Hitler used Land's policy "for the duration" by shooting Husemann, German miners' secretary; Muth, textile union head; Funk, Ruhr, miners' leader city's women were working, as against 23.5 per cent for the entire country, and 31 per cent for urban areas as a whole.

In July of this year, the report continued, at least 44,000 women were working in 829 war plants.

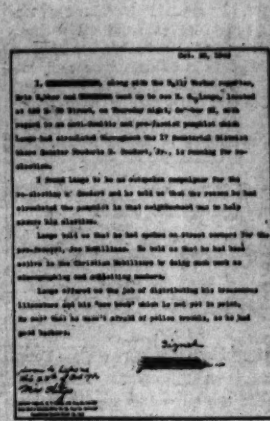

Besides, many other women displaced men in jobs of other sorts, especially white-collar jobs, and other New York women are working outside the city.

And the substitution of women for men workers is only just beginning.

Compared with the tremendous need indicated in these figures, facilities, as enumerated in the report, are insignificant. In the five

Coudert's Anti-Semitic Friends in Action!

Anti-Semitic friends of Vichy's counsel Frederic Coudert, Jr., are on the loose in the 17th Senatorial District. Above left is a notarized statement signed by a witness to the conversation between the Daily Worker reporter and Christian Frontier Lange. Names of signers of the affidavit and second witnesses are blacked out to protect them from physical violence from "Frontiers." Their names will be turned over to interested law enforcement authorities at request.

Center is reproduction of a section of pamphlet distributed by Lange's followers throughout Coudert's district. Its vicious anti-Semitic theme is clearly seen. At right is shown a handful of the pamphlets Lange gave to the Daily Worker reporter and the two witnesses.

What a Fascist Says of Coudert--'He's My Man'

By ERIC WEBBER

H. G. Lange, Sr., hates the Jews and wants Senator Frederick R. Coudert, Jr., who is running for re-election in the 17th Senatorial District to retain office.

Lange is the author of a vicious anti-Semitic pamphlet which has received a distribution of 2,500 in the Coudert territory.

This man is the organizer of the American Security Vigilance movement. It embodies the principles of the German-American Bund and the Christian Front.

He wants the Jews, or the "international people" as he calls them, to be suppressed in the same fashion as in Hitler Germany.

ACTIVE FOR COUDERT

Lange is actively campaigning for Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., as he did in 1940 for Joe McWilliams, organizer of the Christian Mobilizers.

H. G. Lange of 428 E. 80th St., made these statements to this reporter and two friends last Thursday night. The affidavit of one of the witnesses appears with this story.

After having obtained a copy of the pamphlet published by Lange, I set out to ascertain his connections, and a clear cut picture of his policies.

I went up to see him Thursday morning. He wasn't home. His wife said that she didn't know anything about his activities, and anyway, I looked "like a detective."

After reassuring her that I was really a good guy, I pulled some prominent Christian Front names out of my hat to prove it. She asked me to sit down.

AN INTERVIEW

Throughout our entire conversation, she was evasive. I finally managed to convince her that I wanted to work along with her husband in his project.

"What will your fee be?" she asked.

"I'm not interested in fee," I said. "If your husband is working for the same thing I am, I'll go along with him."

She was smart and close-mouthed. I made an appointment with her.

5 Reasons for 2nd Front Now

(Special to the Daily Worker)

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 23.—Houston members of the National Maritime Union asked President Roosevelt in a wire to act quickly on the Second Front for five reasons:

1. Because they were united behind him for the fulfillment of the June 11 agreement for a Second Front;

2. Because delays bring death to more seamen;

3. Because further delay will bring greater losses to the armed forces as well;

4. Because Hitler must not be permitted to choose his own front to strike;

5. Because the American people will unite behind the President against the appeasers for quick victory.

Dewey Plea to Women Phony, Amter Declares

By Harry Raymond

(Daily Worker Staff Correspondent)

YONKERS, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Bringing his campaign personally to Westchester County tonight, Israel Amter, Communist candidate for Governor, made a special appeal to women voters.

Speaking at Sokol Hall, in the heart of a Republican stronghold, he charged that GOP Candidate Thomas E. Dewey's recent appeal for the women's vote was based on "false premises" and "hypocritical promises."

He again pointed out that Dewey could not be considered a "tender evi" and that both Dewey and John J. Bennett, Jr., Democratic candidate, through their failure to openly back a genuine offensive war policy and the demand for a second land front in Europe, should not receive support of labor, liberal and progressive voters.

The communist candidate demanded to know:

1. Where was Mr. Dewey when his Republican colleagues in the State Legislature this year killed the Johnson-Dorn Bill to set up nurseries for children of women working in war industries?

2. Where were Mr. Dewey and his colleagues during the fight for minimum wages for women?

3. If Dewey opposes discrimination

Must Rout Foes At Home--Davis

By Abner W. Berry

(Daily Worker Staff Correspondent)

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 23.—In this one-time center of the abolitionist movement, where Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglass were active, Benjamin Davis, Jr., Communist candidate for Representative-at-Large last night lauded "the fair-minded citizens of the city" who "expressed their democratic sentiments that I, a Negro, be permitted accommodations in this very hotel in which I now stand."

Leading white and Negro citizens including the Mayor had fought victoriously to remove the anti-Negro ban in Hotel Syracuse.

An audience of 400, most of whom were white Syracuseans, nearly filled the main ballroom of Hotel Syracuse. They applauded Mr. Davis' call to "take a firm stand against the White Supremacy scoundrels at

Force Nazis To Dig In

(By The Worker Foreign Department)

Pushing ahead determinedly the Red Army in Stalingrad has recaptured several streets and has taken another height north of the city despite desperate resistance from the Germans.

While there were no Nazi mass onslaughts, bitter fighting in the city continues, particularly in the worker's settlement where the Germans previously tried to break through to the Volga. The Germans are attempting new to seize individual buildings by sharp attacks, instead of the previous efforts to capture whole districts.

According to Red Star the Germans are increasingly attempting to fortify their positions against the repeated counter-attacks by the Soviet troops.

Northwest of the city, Soviet High Command communique reported, a Soviet unit captured an important height, and supplementary reports said that the Soviet troops had "gained improved positions." In one sector more than 400 Rumanians were killed in trying to regain posts they had lost the previous day.

DESTROY NAZI WEDGE

In the Mosdok area Soviet units wiped out a German wedge driven into the Soviet defenses Thursday. The Nazis left 200 dead when they fell far back.

Summing up the last month of the Stalingrad battle, Red Star, Soviet army paper said 22 German divisions were still in the city—18 infantry, three motorized and four armored, an approximate total of 200,000 men with 500 tanks, 1,000 guns, and 800 planes, United Press reported.

Red Star estimated that the Ger-

Hurl Back New Solomon Thrust

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (UP).—

A second Japanese "feeler" attack has been repulsed by American forces on Guadalcanal and 12 more enemy planes have been shot down in renewed attacks on Henderson Field, the Navy announced today.

The land thrust—the second in as many days—was attempted Tuesday (Washington Time) by a "small force" which again struck without success at the American western flank.

Details of the attack were not given but a communique made it plain the main enemy drive had not yet begun.

American fliers still bore the brunt of the fighting in the Solomons area—breaking up two more Japanese bombing forays against the airbase on Guadalcanal and attacking enemy positions on Russell Island, about 30 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

This was the first mention by the navy of Russell Island.

The communique also revealed

The Costliest 50 Days in Military History

THE three main prongs of the German late-summer campaign have now virtually been stuck for many weeks. These prongs have been directed at Stalingrad, Grozny and Tuapse.

In the Grozny (Moskovo) sector, between Sept. 1 and Oct. 20, the Germans have lost 39,000 men killed and 772 tanks.

In the Tuapse (Novorossiysk) sector the Germans have lost, between Sept. 2 and Oct. 20, 45,000 men killed and 130 tanks.

At Stalingrad the Germans, between Aug. 23 and Oct. 20, have lost 150,000 men killed and 2,200 tanks.

The grand total for the main sectors of the Southern Front is 234,000 men killed and 3,102 tanks destroyed. Add to this the average ratio of wounded to those killed and we see that the 50-day September-October campaign so far has cost the Germans 1,000,000 men and more than 3,000 tanks.

As far as tanks are concerned, there is no standard of comparison in history at all, but as to men it may be said that these are the costliest 50 days in history.

True, the first few weeks of the German-Soviet campaign cost the Germans even more, but it must be remembered that in those days the Germans were advancing on a front of some 1,000 miles, while now these tremendous losses were incurred on a total frontage which is about three times less than the one of last summer. Thus, we see that the "combat-saturation" this year is considerably greater.

During the last four days now the Germans have not only not moved forward an inch at Stalingrad, but they have lost some ground north-west of the city and south of it. The steppe around the stronghold must be pretty well matted up by the rains and thawing snow. To span it the Germans have only a single-track railroad with a rickety, hastily repaired bridge across the Don. This is no picnic for them.

At Mosdok they have made a slight penetration into the Soviet lines, but this did not carry through and the wedge is now being eliminated. At Novorossiysk the enemy is definitely on the defensive. Along the great stretches of the rest of the front Soviet rolling attacks continue to pin down the enemy.

All in all, a certain degree of optimism appears to be warranted. The Germans are losing momentum, and at a pretty bad time of the year at that. They have already lost their momentum as far as actual territorial advances are concerned. What they are losing now is the "momentum of reinforcement" for their salients.

American forces on Guadalcanal have repelled a minor Japanese thrust against their western flank. It would seem that the Japanese were simply probing.

The RAF bombed Genoa. No details are available at this writing.

Nothing of importance occurred on the other fronts, although there are strong indications that the Mediterranean theatre might flare up soon in more serious and aspects than one. Strange doings, non-military so far, but nevertheless indicative, have happened in Italy (Taylor-Pope-Biddle), in France (Hull's remark anon. "Why"), and in Africa (Darlan's flight to Dakar, "war might soon go to the Riviera," (As of Oct. 22.)

When Tokio Bombed India-- 'To Arms' Was Peasant Call

The peasants of India are set to fight the Japanese fascists to the death, we learn from The Student, journal of the All-India Students' Federation, a copy of which has just reached the Daily Worker.

The following article, which emphasizes the peasant anti-fascist activities in the Chittagong area, is especially notable because it was Chittagong that the Japanese bombed on May 8, killing — among others — the leader of the Dock Workers Union, Chokam Shari.

The article, entitled "Bold Initiative — a Bureau Cracks!" is reprinted from the August issue of The Student, published in Bombay.

As a nation, we are strong today. We have hope today, because our kisans (peasants) are civilized for thousands of years, cultured for centuries, politically awakened for 25 years. When the outlook is dark, when it seems our people shall not be able to unite to win back our homeland, when "National Union" seems a lonely cry of forsaken youth — we remember that our great National Congress has roots deep in the kisan millions and instantly all fatigue is banished. The kisan has built the National Congress. He will not allow it to stand aside and fail to serve the nation at this hour of supreme crisis.

What is the kisan doing today? We give glimpses below.

Chittagong has had a taste of this war. It has seen the havoc wrought by the fascist war-mak-ers. It has heard the agonized cries of the maimed and the dying. It has seen scalded men and women with their limbs shot off, dying men in a confused heap. Chittagong has lived for many weeks, expecting an invasion at any moment. In the tiny frontier villages of this frontier district, it has been Zero Hour for many weeks and months. What happens when you expect to sight the Japanese troops within 24 hours? How do our people react? Do they flee in panic? Do they get ready to welcome the hated invader? Do they feel helpless and resigned?

No! A thousand times No! Under such conditions, there are unbelievable scenes — scenes of heroism, of brother standing by brother — scenes which were common in our past history, which shall be still more universal in the future.

TO ARMS! There was a strong rumour, some time ago, that the "Moga" (Japanese fascists) were about to attack Chittagong. Immediately, the frontier villages of Patia and Porakora and Dhoghat — which is deep behind the frontier — sent a contingent of 4,000 kisans, armed with spears, daks, knives — anything they could lay their hands on. Nor did the women remain at home. Great families and ancient families and humble families with traditions of bravery — came out of their homes on that day. Unbelievable scenes! Four thousand men demonstrate before the mansions of the zemindars (landlords) — thousands of voices roar: "Give us guns! We want guns!"

When such danger threatens, the sons of our people are reborn in terrible strength.

The zemindars hand over their guns — they wanted their lives to be saved. The zemindars learnt in one hour what they had not learnt in a life-time — that they have no strength of their own, if anybody can save them, it is the kisan they oppress. Could they think of their zemindar and their unpaid rent? No! Before their eyes was the vision of thousands of shining bayonets, bomber aircraft, guns and rifles — pitted against the people; and defending the people, kisans, firmly banded together, lathis and fire — arms poised — maddened by the smell of the battle-fields.

PEOPLE'S COURT

In a village somewhere between Mondu and Cox's Bazaar the magistrates bolted with the wave of panic and the courts were closed. The kisans stopped paying the taxes. To settle their internal disputes, they set up a People's Court. The zemindars tumbled off the high horse and came and pleaded with them: "Look, we are partners in danger. We are not any better off than you. Save yourselves and save us." The kisans agreed and paid off a part of the taxes to the zemindars. This is just a glimpse of what will happen everywhere when the battle actually begins.

"HOSHIA!" There is a tiny village very close to the seashore. Everyone says the Japanese will make a landing there. That is why this village does not face the problem of Hindu-Muslim disunity. Moslem League workers give active support to the People's Defense Council and the Volunteer Force.

The People's Defense Brigade has been divided into small detachments. They march through the villages at night. They shout "Hoshia!" and wake people up and speak to them by torch-light. They discuss and explain the technique of resistance to the invader, they train speakers and orators. They march with posters hitched to their shoulders; they explain each picture-poster. Their songs of resistance rouse the village — folk. Their playlets remind the sons of civilized Bengal of the traditions of the Bengali "Jatra." They even take classes of young school-children and earn the blessings of the children's parents. They have built a co-operative too, and have done their best to make the village self-sufficient in the basic necessities of life.

Bordering Assam lies Rangpur district. This is the kisan fortress of North Bengal. The Rangpur kisans know they are on the second line of defense — just as Chittagong is on the front-line. There is a sense of urgency in the air and magnificent tales of resistance.

The kisans of this area are making great long bows. They are regular with their target-practice: they take good aim and shoot arrows; the sharp iron arrow-heads pierce the trunks of the banana-trees. They practice seriously, with the slogan: "One arrow, one Japanese."

In another part of the district, you will be told, the kisans have dug out the ancient swords of their warrior ancestors — they grease these sacred weapons and sharpen them.

Rangpur kisans refuse to be helpless. If there are no fire-arms available, they practice with bows and swords. "Where even swords are not available, they still say, 'We are getting ready.' And if you ask them what they are doing to get ready, they say, 'All the volunteers have been put on the job of cutting down bamboo-stems to make lathis.'"

VOLUNTEER DETACHMENTS Dotted all over the villages are strong, stable volunteer formations. They are built by kisans, middle-class folk, by women who take the initiative to organize their own detachments. Joint committees of Hindus and Moslems lead these volunteer formations and carry through a vigorous enrollment campaign. Three hundred red volunteers march down the village-lanes of Singhmari — Kanthalbari with strong lathis on their shoulders. They march grimly, in perfect formation — the village populace go mad with pride, joy and hope. They are grim, they stare straight ahead. They are crusaders marching on a holy mission. Five hundred Hindu and Moslem kisans of Bhelabardi hold a rally and take an oath of resistance to the Japanese invader and of defense of their sacred motherland.

This is how the villages of Rangpur are transforming the entire area into a fortress of anti-Japanese resistance.

DIGGING DEEP

But the crowning achievement in Rangpur is the wide unity built up in the town for People's Defense. Every section of the townsfolk, all organizations and parties are united today in a single People's Defense Committee (PDC). The Congress, the Moslem League, the Kisan Sabha, the Students' Federation — all belong to it. Even the local bureaucrats are compelled to recognize this committee officially and to send their spokesmen to work in it and for it.

The PDC is gradually taking over the entire conduct of the city's life and activity. For the citizens, the decisions of this PDC are supreme. So much so, that even the bureaucrats, in spite of their internal differences on the questions, are moving more and more towards helping the PDC's work. Volunteers from different "paras" drill in formation regularly — under the direction of the PDC.

The PDC has already become a legend. There is no doubt that the PDC will soon acquire undisputed authority in the town and lead and inspire town and country with its boundless enthusiasm in the anti-Japanese struggle. In this, Rangpur is a model before India.

WORDS LIKE BULLETS

The best political defense of our line that could be made has come from a Rangpur kisan.

A kisan is asked by a political worker, "Comrade, when people say the Japanese will not oppress us, will you raise our standard of living, what do you say in reply?"

He answers, "They come from distant lands. They have left their wives and sisters behind but can they leave their hunger behind too? With what force and simplicity a kisan makes a political point.

Another kisan is told, "Do you see, comrade, even the army can't hold the fascists? How will you, without arms?"

Pat came the answer, "They are not defending their own land, don't you see? If a few thousands like us got arms and became soldiers, we shall send the Japanese flying like footballs."

"They have not left their hunger behind."

"Send them flying like footballs."

These are unforgettable words, these are words like bullets.

India Congress-Moslems Forge Unity Want 'Prompt Action' by Britain

By P. C. Joshi

General Secretary Communist Party of India (By Cable to the Daily Worker)

BOMBAY, Oct. 23.—The official British policy of no settlement with the India National Congress finds no popular support here, either with members of Congress or those outside. All have made it clear that the present policy cannot rally India behind the United Nations.

In a public statement C. Rajagopalachari, former Congress premier of Madras, declares: "Any agreement with non-Congress elements will not add, the least bit of fresh strength to the defense of India."

Jinnah's paper, Dawn, [All Jinnah, Moslem League leader] condemns the government policy and calls for "prompt action."

Further evidence is seen in the dismissal of Allah Bakhsh, premier of Sind Province, without consultation with the legislature. Allah Bakhsh is not associated with the Congress but is an independent Moslem patriot. In an interview given before he was dismissed from his post, he had frankly condemned present disturbances and declared: "I have no hesitation in condemning them. They do the greatest harm to the interests of the country."

UNITY CAMPAIGN Allah Bakhsh had coupled this with a demand for a national government. He has initiated a mass campaign for national unity and national defense.

Every day news about the disturbances are featured by the Indian press. No serious acts of sabotage or destruction are reported but government intransigence and mass arrests are increasing bitterness among the people.

Little news came through from abroad criticizing British policy. The controversy over the recent article in "Life" magazine has evoked lively interest. American sympathy is widely commented on in the Indian press and greatly valued.

The Communist Party has

Captured Japanese Kit

An Australian officer with the U.S. Marines in the Solomons looks over a Japanese parachute supply kit seized in the early fighting around Guadalcanal. Stacked before him are canned meat and vegetables, 315 rounds of ammunition and two kinds of condensed food. The wicker case, left, held these supplies. In his right hand the officer holds the chute's pack.

RAF Gives Genoa Worst Raid of War

LONDON, Oct. 23 (UP).—Four-engined RAF bombers last night raided the busy Axis supply port of Genoa in the heaviest raid of the war on Italy, and completed their dangerous 1,500-mile roundtrip without the loss of a plane, it was announced tonight.

Many "very large" fires were set, the Air Ministry said, and the feat drew the almost unprecedented admission from Radio Rome that the bombers caused heavy damage. The bombers also attacked Turin in industrial north Italy, but concentrated their incendiaries and heavy explosives on Genoa, which with its metropolitan population of more than half a million is Italy's chief port and vital supply terminal for Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in Africa. The Ansaldo aircraft parts and munitions works also is situated there.

Inside Stalingrad With Rodimtsev's Heroes

By L. Kudrevatykh

STALINGRAD, Oct. 23 (ICN).—With the earth rocking under their feet, the area enveloped in flames and bullets whistling overhead, the Guardsmen of Major General Rodimtsev's division are battling heroically for Stalingrad.

It is no easy matter to get to Rodimtsev's unit. Don't forget that you are a load. In place of you some 150 or 170 pounds of shells, grenades, machine gun cartridge belts, meat and grain can be shipped across the Volga. All of this is greatly needed in Stalingrad, and all of this can be delivered only under cover of darkness.

Furthermore, you should know that if necessary you may have to swim across yourself to the opposite bank. You are warned of all this as you sit down in the small motorboat which crosses the river in the twilight and heads for the spot where the battle rages.

FIRES LIGHT HORIZON The black outlines of the buildings stand out on the background of the conflagration. The whole horizon is lit up by shell bursts and by the bright, blinding flame of the rockets which illustrate the war in spots. I am cautioned not to smoke and to talk in an undertone.

Crossing the river, the motorboat glides up to the bank, and lightly creaks as it comes to a standstill. Stumbling over wires and skirting craters, we pass along a street, one side of which is formed by the Volga and the other by earthen huts, dugouts of all kinds and offices dug in the steep bank. The distance between the command post and the main line of resistance fluctuates between 50 and 300 yards.

The commanders of the platoons, companies, battalions, regiments and even General Rodimtsev himself are always here together with their men, near the front line where fighting is in progress for every floor of a house, for every stairway landing, for every shed—in a word, it is the battle for Stalingrad.

RODITSEV—A HERO

The Soviet people know the name of Rodimtsev. The government recognized his exploits by decorating him with high orders, including the title Hero of the Soviet Union. Rodimtsev's Guardsmen have fought on many responsible sectors and their formation was decorated with the Order of Lenin. The effective blows inflicted by the Guards are revealed by the following two examples.

The first: during one of the day battles, the Guardsmen wiped out some 2,000 Nazis, and destroyed 18 tanks and 30 trucks.

The second: when the Germans hurled two infantry divisions and

Who Arranged Hess Mission? Writer Asks

LONDON, Oct. 23 (UP).—The correspondent in Moscow of the periodical New Statesman warned today that the Soviet demand for immediate trial of Rudolf Hess, Nazi leader who is imprisoned in Great Britain, as a war criminal must be taken seriously.

"Many Russians to whom I have talked do not believe that Hess came to Britain without preliminary arrangement by somebody in Britain," the correspondent wrote.

"The secrecy surrounding Hess has become a symbol of something very unhealthy. What if Hess, who might perhaps be a plenipotentiary representative of Hitler, really should be used for some shady deal? As long as Hess is guarded in this mysterious way the Russians worry about the next German peace offensive."

Tokio Violates Geneva Terms, FDR Says

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (UP).—President Roosevelt today described as a violation of the Geneva convention on treatment of war prisoners, Japan's announced intention to visit "severe punishment" upon captured American fliers.

Japan was not a signatory to the Geneva agreement. Asked at his press conference, however, whether Japan's announced intention regarding American fliers was a violation of the convention, Mr. Roosevelt asserted it was.

Asked about the possibility of American reprisals, Mr. Roosevelt said to take that question up with the State Department.

Discussing the shackling of German and Allied prisoners after the Commando raid on Dieppe, the President said that some prisoners captured by the British were manacled en route from landing craft to prison camps as a measure of security and transportation and not in violation of the Geneva convention.

The Germans retaliated, the President added, by wholesale shackling of British and Canadian prisoners who were being transported and were under fixed guard. Thus this shackling was a violation, he said.

Japan is expected to denounce the convention simultaneously, the dispatch said, though she never adhered to the agreement.

U. S. Aide in Chungking Sees 2nd Front

CHUNGKING, Oct. 23 (UP).—Owen Lattimore, American political adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, asserted tonight that "there will be a second front not only in Europe but also in Asia."

Lattimore made his statement in an address before a dinner of 15 cultural societies.

Lattimore said that had it not been for China, the position of the United States in the Far East "would have become hopeless" after Pearl Harbor.

"The loss of Burma greatly increased China's difficulties, but China continued successfully to hold the main front against Japan," he said.

"By so doing, China remained as a base for the final offensive against Japan and final victory, China continues to be the main front in Asia."

TRANSIT UNION ASKS MAYOR ACT ON RAISE

Declaring that real wages on the city-owned transit lines are lower today than when the city took over their operation two years ago, the joint executive committee of Local 100 Transport Workers Union, yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon Mayor LaGuardia to instruct the Board of Transportation to grant a general wage increase to all employees of the transit system.

Cannery Union Backs Farm Labor Bills

(Special to the Daily Worker)
CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—The fourth national convention of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, CIO, meeting here at the Hamilton Hotel, unanimously endorsed the La Follette-Thomas farm labor bills introduced to the Senate. The convention's resolution said:

"We feel that these bills will bring to field workers protection which is long overdue and which has already been accorded to industrial workers, and will go a long way toward solving the pressing problem of the supply of agricultural labor to maintain the food supply of our nation at this critical time."

The convention also called upon President Philip Murray and the entire membership of the CIO to protect the prospect of placing the question of wages for agricultural workers under the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture, and also called upon the CIO to protest the War Manpower Commission's coming order to freeze dairy and livestock workers on their jobs under a "work or fight" edict.

President Donald Henderson of UCAFAWA called the former move comparable to one which would place industrial workers under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce, and the union in its plea to President Murray pointed out "on behalf of the agricultural wage workers and sharecroppers of America whose wages and living conditions are substandard, we urge that these workers be accorded the same rights and opportunities for wage adjustments under the War Labor Board as are guaranteed by the President's executive order to workers in all industry."

The union claimed the proper solution as an alternative to the WAC order is the "adoption by the Government of a well-planned manpower program under a centralized authority in the War Manpower Commission and operating through an effective Employment Service which will provide for orderly training and recruitment of workers from areas of surplus to areas of scarcity to meet the needs of war-time production."

IWO Parades in Bronx Sunday for Civilian Aid

Members of the International Workers Order are busily preparing a colorful contingent for the West Bronx Parade on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 25, sponsored by all Civilian Defense Volunteer efforts to dramatize the work of CDVO.

The resolution was unanimously endorsed by eleven hundred officers and stewards attending the meeting of the joint executive committee at union headquarters, 153 West 54th St., after Douglas L. MacMahon, International Secretary-treasurer and acting President of Local 100, had reported on negotiations with chairman John H. Delaney of the Board of Transportation, on the union's request for wage increases and union security. A copy of the resolution was forwarded to the Mayor.

The resolution points out that the real wages of the transit employees had been reduced by 25 per cent because of the rising cost of living, compulsory deduction for pension, and newly enacted tax legislation. It further pointed out that the granting of an increase at this time would be in conformity with President Roosevelt's executive order of Oct. 3 and with the decision of the National War Labor Board to apply the "Little Steel" formula to disputes involving wage questions.

MAYOR URGED TO ACT
Mayor LaGuardia was urged to direct the Board of Transportation to grant such a general wage increase not only because it would be the "fair, decent and honest" thing to do, but also because it would be consistent with national policy constituting the "law of the land."

"The Board of Transportation cannot transcend this law," the resolution states. "Like every other employer engaged in commercial enterprise, it behooves the Board of Transportation to make its contribution to employ morale and health and to the successful prosecution of the nation's war effort. We ask no more than this of our workers."

"This letter to your honor, is prompted by no selfish considerations. The Transport Workers Union has been in the forefront in advocacy of performance for the war effort. The proposals we make in this letter are designed to contribute to that effort. Every one in America from the President down, recognizes that this life and death struggle for the preservation of our democracy depends in no small part upon the morale and health of our working men and women. A disposition of the current negotiations between the Board of Transportation and the TWU, such as this letter suggests will establish and maintain employee morale on the level on which it should be, and will constitute a blow for victory."

CRITICAL POINT
Commenting on the situation confronting the transit workers who began MacMahon declared that it is rapidly reaching a critical point.

"In the face of the 25 per cent shrinkage in their real wages the workers simply must obtain relief," he stated, "after three months of negotiations the Board of Transportation has shown no disposition to grant such relief. We believe that the Mayor's intervention is necessary if a satisfactory settlement is to be reached."

Last Tuesday, President Philip Murray of the CIO took a hand in the negotiations, but apparently without success. He declared full support of the demands of the transport workers.

Record Corn Crop
Record crops are indicated this year for corn, barley, all grain, all hay, beans and peas, oil seeds, sugar crops, commercial vegetables for canning and processing, and fruits, the Agriculture Department reports.

Mama's Making Airplanes

Anti-Lynch Rally To Hear Gavagan

Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, author of the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill, has accepted an invitation to speak at the Victory Rally, Salem Methodist Church, 129th St. and Seventh Ave., at 4 P.M. tomorrow, the National Emergency Committee to Stop Lynching announced yesterday. Representative Gavagan wired his acceptance to the Committee at headquarters, 1123 Broadway.

Gov't Acts to Curb Wheat, Flour Prices

To forestall increases in the price of bread and flour to the consumer, the Commodity Credit Corp. yesterday acted to release wheat in stock to farmers for sale at market prices.

Bread prices have been fixed at March levels since May, 1942, and flour was recently frozen at levels prevailing during Sept. 28 to Oct. 2. The new program, announced jointly by the Office of Price Administration and the Agriculture Department, will make loan wheat available to farmers at "release prices" below the loan rate, so that the farmers may sell it to millers at levels prevailing from Sept. 28 to Oct. 2.

The program is designed to keep retail bread prices at March levels.

Mrs. FDR Helps Sponsor NMU Ball

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has accepted the sponsorship of the Sixth Annual Dance of the National Maritime Union, which will be held on Saturday, Nov. 14 at the Royal Windsor hall, 53 West 60th Street, it was announced by Joseph Curran, NMU president.

Other sponsors, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, are: Douglas Falconer, National Director of United Seamen's Service; Lawrence Tibbett, Helen Menken; Vincent Price, Herman Shumlin; Paul Robeson, Madeleine Carroll; Lucy Monroe, Morton Downey; Teddy Wilson, John Golden, Sam Jaffe, Patricia Pearson, Tamara, Morris Carnovsky, and the Revue.

Several hundred torpedoes were taken from the shipyard and delivered the weapons of war to many of the United Nations, will be guests at the Dance. Proceeds of the affair will be divided between the United Seamen's Service and Allied War Relief.

Subs Can't Stop Anderson: Vows to Settle With Axis

Aage Anderson, blond Danish seaman of 23, is getting his sea bags together for another trip through the war zone after his third torpeding.

Anderson has two scores to settle with fascism. The Nazis ran over his country while he was at sea and the Vichy French fascists kept him a prisoner—till he escaped in a tiny sail boat.

The young Danish seaman wore a "National Maritime Union" jersey as he told reporters at NMU headquarters of his escape from the Vichyites.

The Vichyites got him just after the betrayal of France in June, 1940. His Danish boat, flying a British flag, was bound for Casablanca, French Morocco, with a cargo from France, when the wireless ticked out he news of Pétain's capitulation. The British convoy commander, however, said the ship should go to Casablanca.

Hitler's Vichy tools interned the sailors on arriving at the African port. And Anderson began planning his escape.

At last his chance came. Transferred after three months to a smaller Moroccan port he joined with a Norwegian and five other Danes in a flight in a little boat they borrowed from another ship at night.

Storms forced them back, while night was still black and the Vichyites were none the wiser. But shot from a river fort stopped their second attempt and they spent 23 days behind bars.

They were Hitler's prisoners, all right, Nazi officers were standing by in the town and the Vichy officials kept warning the seamen not to offend "the High Command."

Anderson and four pals (the Norwegian among them) got away on their third try, in March, 1941, after eight months internment.

and thousands of other active trade unions. Some, like Edgar Andre, transport leader, were beheaded.

Italians told how Mussolini used Land's "shooting" policy too, killing Spartaco Lavagnini, secretary, the metal workers union; Pietro Sereno, secretary of the Turin railway workers; Spartaco Stagnetti, stone mason's leader in Rome and Veronesi and thousands of others.

The refugees noted that Land didn't include Hitler or Mussolini in his "pet hates."

Negro leaders were roused by Land's shooting talk.

"Either criminal stupidity or downright treachery inspired the admiral's death threats to organizers," said Charles E. Collins, executive secretary of the Negro Labor Victory Committee and organizer of the Hotel and Club Workers Union, AFL, yesterday.

"In any case," Collins added, "Land must be driven from office."

Frank Buto, executive secretary of Bakers Local 1, AFL, wired President Roosevelt that Land "must be removed" for his "criminal" statement.

Local 1225, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, wired the President that Land must be discharged.

"Every one of our 7,000 members considers himself to be a labor organizer, organizing for the war effort," said the wire, signed by Sidney Mason, manager and nine organizers. "We believe that if there is any shooting . . . it should be done by our men in the armed forces and be directed against our fascist enemies."

Max Perlow, manager, Local 76B, CIO furniture workers, asked President Roosevelt to oust the shooting-talk author, said:

"The statement of Emory Land breathes fascist hatred of labor and democracy."

"The unashamed violence and destruction of freedom, advocated by Land, is fitting for Nazi Germany, not America."

Sam Burt, manager of the Fur Dressers and Dyers Joint Board, wired the President that "whether lunacy or viciousness inspired Land" he must be retired from public life.

Curran's wire to marine union leaders for a conference for action on Land was sent to the following leaders:

V. J. Malone, secretary, Marine Fireman, Oilers, Waterfenders and Wipers Assn. of the Pacific Coast; Eugene F. Burke, advisory secretary, Marine Cooks and Stewards Assn. of the Pacific Coast;

Harry Lundberg, president, Sailors Union of the Pacific;

John Hawkes, secretary-treasurer, Seafarers International Union;

Harry Bridges, president, International Longshoremen and Warehousemen;

John Green, president, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers;

Samuel J. Hogan, president, Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn.;

Joseph Selly, president, American Communications Assn.;

Captain H. Martin, national president, also Mr. Delaney, of the Masters, Mates and Pilots.

however, if Land will help us get listening devices on our ships instead of talking of shooting us."

TEXAS SPEAKS MIND

Archie Gibbs is a tall, quiet man from Texas. But his voice rang like an anvil as he talked of the admiral's program of "shooting."

"When Land talks about shooting organizers he means us, us rank and file seamen," said Gibbs. "We're all organizers. Every good rank and file member of the National Maritime Union helped organize this union."

"And the man who wants to shoot us has to go,"

Archie, one of the rank-and-file founders of the union, is one of the organizers the labor busters want to get.

Archie, one might add, is somewhat of an expert on fascists, having studied them at first hand.

CIO, AFL PROTESTS

Many more wires were pouring into the White House yesterday from shore workers organizations as a result of the speeches of visiting seamen in various ports and Fire-Land statements issued by Philip Murray, CIO president; Joseph Curran, NMU president, and other leaders.

Labor has noted that Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, rebuked Land for not submitting his speech to the OWI before delivery.

But that rebuke isn't enough. The retired admiral, who talks of Goebbels, must get out of the Government apparatus.

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, is a target of East Boston shipyard workers on two counts—his "shot at sunrise" speech and the layoff of 1,400 in the repair yards of Bethlehem Steel here.

Following a picket demonstration of 50 placard-carrying members of Local 25, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, for support of Governor Saltonstall and the Mayor, Mayor Tobin agreed to join with a union delegation to Washington to interview Land and officials of the Navy.

One of the placards carried by the pickets said:

"Admiral Land's pet peeve is labor organizers. America's pet peeve is Hitler."

The reference was to the speech Land delivered in New York, at which he proposed that organizers be "shot at sunrise" for the duration.

1,400 LAID OFF

Within the past month the Bethlehem repair yard laid off 1,400 workers out of a total of 3,800. The situation is fast heading to the condition of several months ago when 2,000 were laid off and immense shipbuilding facilities were idle for two months.

Thus far the union's attempt to get at the bottom of this situation has run into business-as-usual replies. When its delegation interviewed J. H. Lofland in New York, who is head shipping allocator of the Department of Naval Coordination, he informed them that he had no power to compel operators to take ships to an idle yard if they desired to take their work to another, though over-crowded, yard.

The union's delegation to Washington is pressing for a centralized authority in the shipbuilding industry, through which work can be allocated in accordance with facilities. A representative of the management of Bethlehem Steel here said, when informed of the union's proposal, that such centralized planning would not work because he saw no way of forcing operators to take their ships to yards not of their choosing. He noted that many operators have a part interest in yards and prefer to send their work to those yards, even though crowded, rather than to idle yards.

The union is also voicing strong objection to the cleavage between repair and new construction yards, pointing out that repair yards are well equipped to fit out ships. They demand that repair and new construction yards be brought closer together for a more efficient program.

Amter Blasts Dewey Plea to Women

Mon against Negroes and other minorities, why did he not speak out when his Republican friends in the State Legislature killed the 1942 Reapportionment Bill, which would have given the Negro people of Harlem their own Congressman?

He told the Yonkers audience he was certain women of the nation, who are taking a first place in the war industries, want vigorous prosecution of the war, bringing it to Hitler on the European front in the same manner our Soviet allies are fighting in the East.

"Women will make up nearly 50 per cent of the voters of New York State this year," Amter said. "Hundreds of thousands are in war industries, and in many instances representing a majority in the industrial plant. More thousands will soon follow them."

"However, if these women are to take their places in industry it is absolutely necessary that child care centers be established to take care of the children so the women can be free to do their work with all energy."

In spite of this generally recognized fact, the Communist candidate declared, the Republican-controlled State Legislature killed the Johnson-Dorn Bill for setting up such centers.

Amter charged that the GOP candidate was more interested in the votes of the Negro people than in their welfare.

"Dewey," he said, "made a demagogic speech at the Baptist Convention last Sunday, but when he was approached at the convention to make a statement on the three recent lynchings in Mississippi he refused point blank. These lynchings were uppermost in the minds of the Negro people all over the country."

"It again was the Republican-controlled legislature that killed the 1942 Reapportionment Bill, which would have given the Negro people of Harlem the possibility of electing a Negro Congressman."

Amter questioned the sincerity of Dewey's attempt yesterday in Brooklyn to appear as the champion of the Jews.

"This is pretty belated," he told the Westchester audience. "The fact of the matter is that more than a month ago hothead attacks were made on Jewish citizens and their meeting places in various parts of New York City. They were directly inspired by Coughlin and his Christian Front."

"Where were both Dewey and Bennett when these attacks took place? Why haven't they both publicly denounced Coughlin, Edward Lodge Curran, Coughlin's eastern representative, and the Christian Front which organized these attacks?"

Missouri Shows How

Today Active Partners is happy to give over its column to a report from the Missouri district on its successful Daily Worker and a Worker campaign, and the methods used to make these two wins—the war papers leading instruments for victory in this key industrial and farm area.

During the first six months of this year we secured over 600 subscriptions to The Worker in the state of Missouri. We have, however, fallen down on the job of giving consistent attention to this work, with the result that at present some 250 subscriptions are expiring, and unless full clarity exists on this sector of our activity, hundreds of workers will be cut off from receiving the paper which is so essential to our war effort and our proper understanding of the issues in this people's war. For that reason it is necessary that we briefly review the role of the working class press and particularly its role and importance during the life and death struggle in which our country is now engaged.

When our country entered the war, the National Committee stated: "The single greatest contribution to the war effort and victory can be made by every member by spreading the Daily Worker and The Worker. It will help clarify and mobilize the nation for an all-out war effort."

In a speech to the New York Daily Worker Council meeting, Earl Browder, General Secretary of our Party, said:

"Building circulation of The Worker is just as vital today for the winning of the war as manning a machine gun on the front line in Stalingrad."

Why does Browder place the question of the working class press so sharply? Here are some of the reasons:

1st: The role of the press is to confuse and defeat our country. In all key cities the press has their organs of expression. Look at the campaign against the second front, the attempts to defend sabotage of the all-out economic war program. Only a militant policy such as that of the Daily Worker and The Worker can properly cope with and expose these enemies of our country. To win a victory we have to know the enemy within as well as without.

2nd: The pro-war capitalist press is not sufficient, because while these papers support the war effort, they lack the all-around program for victory. Example: The St. Louis Star-Times. The Star-Times is as good a win-the-war paper as any in the country, but its editorials on labor, on the present situation in Congress, etc., still reflect the old methods of finding solutions, with the result that it lacks clarity and necessary leadership.

3rd: Union papers are necessary and important to win the war, but do not and cannot reflect the interests of the whole working class and the nation. Examine any union newspaper and you will find it is forced to give attention mainly to its own industry and union. This is natural and should be so. If these union papers do a good job in their respective industries and unions they are doing their bit. However, an over-all coverage of the most essential economic problems and of how they are being dealt with "politically" cannot be found in these union papers—that is a task for the Daily Worker and The Worker. Every union activist and leader should read the Daily Worker and The Worker so he can apply the lessons of national experience to his own industry and union. No paper in the country has a national labor outlook and a full coverage of the experiences of labor except the Daily Worker and The Worker.

4th: A people's war for national liberation demands clarity, mass participation and collective as well as individual understanding of the manifold problems. The masses must understand the main problems, if we are to raise and maintain proper morale, solidify national unity, overcome and expose the enemies who are trying to divide us and bring internal disruption—as shown, for instance, by the lynchings and poll-tax Bourbons against the Negro people. To win real victory demands greater understanding and clarity than ever before. That is why Browder and the Party insist on spreading The Worker to every man and woman. In this sense the Daily Worker and The Worker act as collective educator and organizer of the people. They are the best assistants to the organizer and continue the work when he is not in contact with the people personally. From this angle they are the most important medium to raise the political level of the whole nation.

'Coudert's My Man,' Says Local Fascist to 'Daily' Reporter

Mr. Lange for that night, at 10:30. When he came in, he looked at me and said, "Hope I didn't cause any trouble in Harlem."

"Don't know you from Harlem," I said, "but I know what you're doing for Coudert. That was some pamphlet you published."

He asked the three of us into the front room.

"We'd like to work with you," I said.

He looked at us skeptically, and asked who we were.

FAL OF McWILLIAMS

I told him that I had worked with Joe McWilliams, and that I knew Cassidy. Choice of the last name was a stab in the dark. I didn't know Cassidy from Adam.

Lange smiled. "So you know Cassidy? I know him too. He was McWilliams' bodyguard," he told my friends.

I tried to put him on the defensive. "But McWilliams never mentioned you," I said.

"I knew Mac well," Lange answered.

He went over to a cupboard and rummaged through it. "I may have some of the leaflets I mimeographed for him."

On the second thought, he stopped. "It doesn't make any difference," he said. "If you see Mac, just mention my name to him."

I directed the conversation to the elections.

"So you're for Coudert,"

COUDERT 'MY MAN'

"He's my man," Lange said. "What we need is real Christian unity. We gotta put the Jews in their place."

"How about Bennett?" I asked.

"Are you for him too?"

"Bennett's a good man, but I'm all for Dewey."

We finally got around to his pamphlet.

"How did you distribute so many of them?" one of the fellows with me asked.

Lange laughed. "It was easy. I'm a door man in a big house over near the parkway. I get to know a lot of maids. I give them the pamphlets and they give them out for me."

"What is the unit number eight, you talk about in your pamphlet?" Lange shut up. He wouldn't talk. Before we left, an arrangement was reached whereby my friends and I were to be distributors for Lange's American Security Vigilance movement, and I was to be the educational director.

He promised faithfully that if I was a good boy and did a good job, I'd get to know all about the organization, and his "cronies" who hang out in front of the bank" who are "doing a good job of getting all the Christians together."

I never did find out about his cronies and the bank and unit eight.

But I did find out that this man was a confirmed fascist and was interested in getting defeatists like Coudert elected to public office.

The Allied Voters Against Coudert stated yesterday that documents in its possession indicated that the action of Hermann Hoffman, Grand Master of the Order of B'nai Abraham, in supporting Coudert, was entirely a personal action, and that he did not speak for the organization.

A letter sent to Hoffman by Solomon Rice, former deputy Grand Master, stated that "in view of the report prepared by Brother Max Wolff on behalf of the American Jewish Congress with

Field Day for Special Interests

Council Stooges Gag City Power Plea

The City Council finance committee yesterday held what was called a "public hearing" on the Mayor's proposal to take over the Staten Island Edison Corporation as a power yardstick.

In effect, however, the hearing, held at City Hall, was a field day for chambers of commerce and realty interests.

Their spokesman, Charles A. Tuttle, held forth for more than an hour attacking the project, which the Mayor says will bring the city benefits in reduced lighting costs.

Tuttle was ably assisted by Committee Chairman Joseph Kinsley and Councilman Louis Cohen of the Bronx, both Democrats, who made clear their outright opposition to the project although they were presumably conducting the hearing.

ISAACS HITS KINSLEY

Their procedure brought forth a charge from Councilman Stanley Isaacs that the chairman had been "unfair" and a complaint that proponents had not been able to present their case.

Tuttle's declamation, attacking the power yardstick as an "invasion of private economic enterprise" and demanding exact cost figures, was followed by a dozen or more chambers of commerce and realty spokesmen.

Supporters of the Mayor's plan, including union and consumer representatives, were still waiting to be heard when the hearings were adjourned until Friday, Nov. 5, at 2 P. M.

Only Comptroller Joseph McGoldrick of the supporters got the floor before the 5 P. M. deadline set by the committee.

STOOGES FOR C. OF C.

Kinsley and Cohen heckled him so persistently that he couldn't present the case for municipal yardsticks which national experience has shown invariably brings down lighting costs.

They followed Tuttle's cue and insisted that the committee couldn't set on the Mayor's proposal for a statewide referendum if it had only a maximum and minimum figure on the possible purchase price before them. The maximum figure in the bill is $16,500,000 to buy the plant.

"When we acted on unification (of the transit lines) we had much actual information before us," Cohen said.

McGoldrick corrected him. "When you acted on unification you have no more information than you have on this," he said. "You can get more exact figures now. We are proposing a bill which fixes a maximum and the final figure would be set in negotiation. The Public Service Commission has been making a two-year study on the physical valuation of the plant."

McGoldrick did point out that the Edison plant had made a profit of a million dollars in 1941 and submitted figures that showed that the city paid the firm $482,507 for street lighting in Richmond that same year.

Council Pres. Newbold Morris spoke for the Mayor's plan but like the rest of the supporters, wasn't able to present his case to the committee.

Paterson to Hear Minor Tomorrow

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PATERSON, Oct. 23. — Robert Minor, assistant general secretary of the Communist Party, will be the main speaker at a win-the-war election rally to be held here on Sunday. The noted working class leader will be heard at Carpenters Hall, 85 Van Houten St., at 8 P. M.

Other speakers include Jim West, Young Communist League leader of New Jersey; Sophie Feinstein, candidate for Assembly and well-known trade union and Negro personalities.

John Fleming, Negro baritone, will be heard in a selection of songs.

'Worker' Election Issue Sun.

The New York edition of the Oct. 25 issue of The Worker will deal especially with the issues and candidates of the New York Election Campaign. Advance orders indicate the widest kind of circulation of this important and informative edition among the voters of this city and state.

Burdick Gets Wide Support In Brooklyn

Abraham Burdick, candidate for the State Senate in the Eighth Senatorial District, Kings, on the American Labor Party, is conducting a vigorous win-the-war campaign by bringing the need for an immediate second front to his community.

Burdick who has the endorsement of the New York CIO Industrial Union Council and the Trade Union Committee to Win the War, is also receiving strong support from thousands of trade unionists.

The candidate is the business agent of Local 1225 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO.

Burdick is assuring his voters that they will have a real win-the-war candidate if he is elected. His union is responsible for speeding production throughout the city. Two Local 1225 shops were awarded the Navy "E" recently.

The ALP candidate stands on his record, not a union-as-usual or politics-as-usual record, but an all-out aggressive fight on all economic and political fronts.

He is known to the 7,000 members of Local 1225 for his fight for labor-management committees in "UE" shops, for his drive for payroll deduction plan and for blood donations. Burdick has fought for jobs for women and Negroes in skilled jobs.

And most significant of all, the ALP candidate has the interests of all Americans at heart by taking a sharp, decisive stand on the need for action now in Europe.

Martin Answers Penn. Negroes: It's Jim Crow!

By Adam Lapin

(Daily Worker Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 23.—Ex-general Martin, who is now running for governor of Pennsylvania on the Republican ticket, opposed the administration of Negroes into the state National Guard.

And this is one of the most important political liabilities of the Pew-Grundy candidate who withdrew from the Army to run for office at a time of national crisis when every available man is needed for the armed forces.

In this state the approximately 300,000 eligible Negro voters are an important factor. Many political observers here, both Negro and white, believe that in any close election they may become a decisive factor.

THE VITAL NEGRO VOTE

Martin has forfeited Negro votes which he might normally have gotten. There are still quite a few Negroes in Pennsylvania who continue to think of the defeatist, corrupt Republican Party as the party of Abraham Lincoln and Thaddeus Stevens. And these Negroes are not likely to vote for Martin.

Whether the Negro people of the state will turn out to vote for F. Clair Ross, the win-the-war candidate for governor is another question.

The answer will depend on whether Ross and the Democratic Party come forward with a strong, positive appeal to the Negro people and with a program designed to give them real participation in the war program. At the moment, many Negroes are inclined to stay away from the polls altogether.

The National Guard incident will certainly tell against Martin.

For several years the Negro people of the state have been demanding admission into the Pennsylvania National Guard.

On Sept. 12, 1940 this demand was put before Martin, who was then Adjutant General of the National Guard by a delegation of prominent Negro leaders.

Martin told the delegation that Negroes could not be admitted into the National Guard in the same units with whites because of a War Department ruling made 60 years before.

JIM CROW ADVOCATE

The ex-general promised that he would use his influence with the War Department to establish Jim Crow units which would be attached to the National Guard for training purposes.

And he has since tried to exploit this promise by trying to shift away his position on admission of Negroes to the National Guard.

While Martin claims to have supported a bill for Jim Crow units, no Negroes were ever admitted to the Pennsylvania National Guard under Martin's regime.

This episode is typical of the attitude of the Republican state administration toward the Negro people. Governor Arthur James was pressed for action on the National Guard issue by another Negro delegation in 1936, he replied:

"You must remember there are customs in this country stronger than laws."

REFUSED NEGRO JOBS

Martin himself during his years in office as Auditor General and State Treasurer refused to hire Negroes in any jobs above the rank of messenger.

The failure of the Democratic Party in the state to take and establish a clear-cut record on the Negro question has however created a situation where the Democratic candidates are by no means certain to get the Negro vote.

Roman to Talk On Radio Oct. 31

Armando Roman, Executive Secretary of the Lower Harlem district of the Communist Party, will deliver an election talk over radio station WBYN, 7 P. M., Saturday, Oct. 31. Mr. Roman will speak on behalf of the Communist Party candidates, Israel Amter for governor, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn and Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., for representative-at-large.

The topic will be "The Spanish People and the Election Campaign."

AFL Group Gives Soviet Aid $5,000

After hearing Lieutenant Lyudmila Pavlichenko, Russia's famous girl sniper officially credited with killing 309 German officers and men, describe the needs of the Russian people, the Lockheed-Vega Employees' Book-of-the-Month-for-Victory Club, of Burbank, Calif., Aeronautical Lodge 727 of the International Machineists Association, AFL, voted to contribute $5,000 to Russian War Relief, Inc. The check was forwarded to the relief agency by Dale O. Reed, president of Lodge 727 and chairman of the club.

This is shown most clearly in the fourth Congressional District where Rep. John E. Sheridan may lose the election because the large Negro population in the district feels that he has not championed their demands for jobs and in war industry and adequate housing.

It is true that Sheridan's record on war issues leaves much to be desired. It is erratic at best. Sheridan has also absented himself from the House on many important votes. Nevertheless, he is concerned preferable to Howard T. Scott, the Republican candidate who has appeasement connections.

What has happened in the district is that Dr. Harry Greene, now a Lieutenant in the Army and president of the Philadelphia branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, is running as an independent, with the support of a number of Negro leaders. It is entirely possible that Scott may squeeze through as a result.

WANT ALL-OUT POSITION

Sheridan is undoubtedly an exceptional case. But there is a widespread feeling among the Negro people that the win-the-war candidates have not come out boldly enough for their full participation in the war effort.

Ross and the other win-the-war candidates have not come out boldly with a program to provide job opportunities for the Negro people, to enforce the state Equal Rights law against discrimination, which has been a dead letter under both Democratic and Republican administrations, and to provide adequate housing.

There is a conviction among Negro leaders here that if Ross and the other win-the-war candidates were to become the proponents of such a program they would sweep the Negro vote in Pennsylvania.

Cloak Board OK's Nov. 7 Amity Parley

The Cloakmakers Joint Board of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union has endorsed the Conference on American-Soviet Friendship which will be held Nov. 7 and 8, marking the 25th anniversary of the Soviet Union.

Action was taken at a board meeting after a communication inviting the union's participation was received. Louis Langer, recording secretary, made the motion of endorsement. The board will be represented by four delegates.

Victory Forces Push Campaign To Elect Slade

White collar production workers are backing Albert Slade, youthful win-the-war American Labor Party candidate in the Ninth Congressional District, which includes East New York, parts of Ridgewood and Richmond Hill neighborhoods.

An organizer of the Book and Magazine Guild, United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, Slade has taken an advanced position on the need for all-out production and immediate action in Europe.

The ALP candidate, who has received the endorsement of the New York CIO Industrial Union Council, belongs to a union which is mobilized behind the President's seven-point program.

His opponent, Eugene J. Keogh, Democratic incumbent, has never lifted a finger against Christian Front and Bundist activities in his district.

He was one of the last Democrats to sign the petition to get action on the Geyer anti-poll tax bill. He is famous in his neighborhood for his do-nothing attitude.

Slade has pledged himself to unlimited support of the President's domestic policy and his policy to act on a second front.

'Village in August' By T'ien Chun

(SYNOPSIS: The guerrillas are preparing to evacuate the village fearing a Japanese attack is imminent. Ch'en Chu, making preparations for the withdrawal, puts Hsiao Ming in charge of the rear guard and warns him not to let his love for Anna interfere with his duty. Anna, blushing with shame and anger tells Ch'en Chu that her love would never stand in the way of her duty and if it did she would denounce it. She storms out. Hsiao Ming leaves also dejected at the turn of events.)

HE chose a dark corner of the wall and sat down. From there he could see the little square of lighted paper that was Anna's window. The snoring of the men sleeping in the barracks nearby came to him clearly. Clearer still were the even footsteps of the sentry outside the second compound.

Fragments of ideas crowded the corners of his mind. The anguish of his inner conflict made even his breathing scarcely bearable. He thought of the insulting and contemptuous attitude Liang Hsing had recently adopted toward him. Little Red Face, Third Brother Li... the others who had run away with him to join the Army of Resistance, all had been his comrades and his brothers, and now there had come a strangeness between them, a distance which separated them. Hardest of all to bear were the stories the younger members of the troop had invented about Anna, and which for days had been bandied about in the barracks.

"Our friend, Hsiao Ming, really functions, doesn't he?"

"A cock for our comrade, the woman trooper! She likes the pretty boys like all the rest of them! Her mother's! Big mug-faced fellows like us, we could carry on this damned resistance for the rest of our lives, and get blown to bits for doing it, and no woman would ever fall for us!"

"For all this resistance business, it would be better to be a soldier in one of the old-time armies. First to the garison then to the houses, and if they didn't treat you right, you put a raw-hide whip to them. Mother's! What is this business they call love anyway? It all boils down to this: Men should have women and women should have men. Love!"

"YOU'd better be a little more decent in that speech of yours. We're members of the Revolutionary Army! The troops in this army can't talk and act like a bunch of hoodlum Japanese!"

"So? In the Revolutionary Army we ought to act like members of the Revolutionary Army, eh? Well, then, how about Comrade Hsiao Ming? Carrying on a 'love' affair with that Korean girl, is that what the Revolutionary Army is about? 'Love' Army, eh?"

"The General is the sly one! Pretending he's deaf and blind!"

Thus they talked when they knew Hsiao Ming was within earshot. But they were still outwardly respectful to Anna.

The only person who had not sneered at him was Iron Eagle. He was always as grave as a statue, and as dignified. But once when he had met Hsiao Ming alone he had grasped his hand warmly.

give them, Hsiao Ming. But... perhaps a little more emotional control, comrade. Our duty to the group must not suffer. Oh, I'm not remonstrating. But remember what happened to Boli T'ang... Seventh Sister lies out yonder... just over the wall..."

"I know, Iron Eagle. It's not only that we are comrades—it's more than that. I respect you as if you were my own elder brother. I'll remember... and I'll try."

He had told himself a thousand times over that he must learn control, and a thousand times he had taken an oath to do so. He was close to a course he knew in his heart would be a mistaken one; he had prayed for divine help and he had thought of suicide, but nothing had availed to do more for him than to further weaken his will.

"Anna! He called her name softly, watching the little square of paper still lighted by the lamp within. The even footfalls of the sentry outside the second compound still followed their unchanging rhythm. The cold of the night made him shiver a little.

"Anna! He was close to the window now, and as he whispered her name he tapped ever so lightly on the window sill. There was no response from within, and he almost lost the courage to tap again. He held his breath. He heard Anna cough lightly. Only then could he find his voice to speak again, but he made up his mind that if she did not answer this time he would go away.

"Anna, are you asleep?"

"No. Is that you, Hsiao Ming?"

"Yes, Anna."

"Must you come in?" The voice inside was cool and without emotion.

FROM the sound of it he could tell that she was lying on the brick bed, and for a moment, again he turned irresolute. Should he go in? Was there any need for it? Tomorrow the malicious talk among his comrades of the company would only be worse than ever. But if he didn't, in a few hours' time—at five-thirty in the morning—everything would be finished. Once they had parted would they ever meet again, tranquil and free? Certainly there was no assurance of it. Death might find either or both of them at any time!

"Yes, I have to talk to you, Anna! It isn't too late? Tomorrow morning you'll be going!"

"All right then. Do please come in." Hsiao Ming had not expected so ready an assent, and he was almost shocked by the forthright simplicity of it.

Only Game in the City Today

Manhattan Seeks First Major Win Over Big Duquesne

New York will see little football this afternoon for the first time this season. The only game in the Big Town will pit Manhattan against the strong Duquesne team which last week suffered its first defeat of the year at the hands of North Carolina. The game will be at the Polo Grounds.

Manhattan will be trying for their first major win of the season. Two weeks ago the Jaspers came through with their very best game in losing to powerful and heavy George town, 9-7. Manhattan really put up a fight before they succumbed to the talent wealthy Hoyas and coach Herb Kopf came home with stars in his eyes as did his young players. Things looked like a cinch.

But then came Detroit last week with Elmer Madarik to dish out some of his shellacking which left Kopf and his boys stunned. So this afternoon Manhattan will be in their trying their best but not quite as cocky as they were a week ago Saturday.

The Jaspers devoted most of the two-hour drill at Manhattan Field yesterday to all phases of their passing game, with the linemen coming in for contact work. The secondaries concentrated on setting up adequate defenses against Duquesne's overhead plays, which revolve around Max Kleibass, the Ducks' triple threat wingback. Kleibass is also the squad's best running back.

When Kopf was satisfied with the Jaspers' defensive measures, he had them try their own pitching arms, with Bill Burns and Harry Ulrich, quarterbacks, and George Pastuszak, freshman tailback, doing the throwing. From a 6 foot 4 inch right end, Lambert and Bill Livols, junior end, proved good targets for their tosses.

Duquesne's attack will be centered around Johnny Goode and Max Kleibass who are the running and passing threats. The Iron Ducks come to town with one of the most

Lions Hope to Hold Penn to Decent Score

The Columbia Lions, still to taste the sweet fruits of victory over a major opponent, run into still more woe this afternoon when they meet up with mighty Penn, considered by many to be the outstanding team in the East despite the upset tie with the Princeton Tigers last week.

The Lions will have to cope with a terrifically fast and heavy team—one that can put on power at any given moment. . . . To strike back at the wealth of talent and power which the Pennsylvanians can throw into the fray, Columbia will depend again on the true arm of Paul Governali, the pitching halfback. If Ken Germann is in good shape and able to play a good portion of the game, the Lions stand a chance of holding down the score to respectable dimensions. . . . But they don't stand a chance in the world of winning. . . . It's a tough one against heavy artillery. . . . Take your pick—Nat Low.

Grid Spotlight on Them Today:

Amazing Notre Dame Meets Rugged, Unbeaten Illinois

Two of the nation's most talked-about football coaches—Ed McKeever of Notre Dame and Ray Eliot of Illinois—send their teams against each other today at Champaign, Ill., in a game that headlines the mid-west's grid schedule.

It takes unusual circumstances to crowd the first "big" Saturday of the Western Conference championship race into the background, but that's what the battle between undefeated Illinois and the rejuvenated Notre Dame eleven does.

In the Big Ten encounters, all of which have vital bearings on the title outcome, Ohio State meets Northwestern at Evanston, Wisconsin plays Purdue at Lafayette, Michigan goes to Minneapolis to face Minnesota, and Iowa engages Indiana at Bloomington.

In the only other game involving a mid-west team, the disappointing Great Lakes outfit tangles with Michigan State at East Lansing. The Iowa Naval Cadets are idle as their scheduled game with the St. Mary's (Cal.) pre-flight school was cancelled.

The Illinois-Notre Dame battle has captured grid fans' fancy.

McKeever and Eliot started the campaign as virtual "unknowns," but quickly rocketed to the top in which he directed the Irish to convincing victories over Stanford and the Iowa Cadets in the absence of Head Coach Frank Leahy who is ill, and Eliot by lifting Illinois from a "door mat" into a national title contender.

There are some experts who believe Illinois is on "borrowed time"—that its winning streak has been stretched to the limit of the team's capabilities. That may be the case, but the Illinois outfit has revealed in being the underdog. Its alertness and rugged defensive play in beating Minnesota and Iowa indicate it is a combination that can be troublesome to any opponent.

Because of its impressive 28 to 0 victory over Bernie Bierman's Seahawks last week, Notre Dame must be rated the favorite.

Regarded primarily as a "passing team" until the game with the Iowa Cadets, Notre Dame proved then that it possesses a versatile running attack to go with the aerial work of the talented Angelo Bertelli.

Ohio State, with a perfect record in four games, is the choice over Northwestern. The Bucks have a fine running attack, led by sophomore fullback Gene Fekete, and one of the game's great pass receivers in lanky Bob Shaw. That combination appears too much for the Wildcats to handle. Northeastern puts its hopes for an upset on Otto Graham, who completed 20 out of 28 passes against Michigan last week.

Considerable tradition is wrapped about the Michigan-Minnesota meeting and the fight for the "little brown jug." Michigan, with a greater array of star backs, is favored to beat the Gophers for the first time since 1937.

F.D.R. — "Exigencies of War"

Army-Navy Contest Moved to Annapolis

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (UP).—The Army-Navy football game, the nation's biggest annual gridiron show, will be played this year at Annapolis, Md., and tickets will be available only to residents of the Maryland capital—"not outsiders," the White House announced last night.

Not even cadets from the military academy at West Point—except members of the Army team—will be permitted to attend. The rigid restrictions were ordered because it is President Roosevelt's "opinion that the exigencies of the war with their admitted needs for economy and sacrifice—at least until the war is won—can be served only by the imposition this year of these unusual limitations."

The game will be played on the originally scheduled date, Nov. 28. There was immediate speculation that this may be the last Army-Navy game for the duration. This was inspired by a phrase in the official statement pointing out that one of the determining factors in the decision was "that the game was scheduled before war was declared."

It was expected that all contracts entered into under original plans to hold the game at Philadelphia would be cancelled and that money for advance ticket purchases would be refunded.

There was no immediate indication whether the "not outsiders" rule would apply to sports writers and radio broadcasters. It is anticipated, however, that accredited newsmen and radio-casters will be permitted to report the game, with the possibility a limitation might be placed on the number of reporters.

Branch Rickey, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, said yesterday "that isn't so" when asked to comment on the report of a New York sports columnist that he had accepted a position as head of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Annapolis Fans 'Ticked'

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 23 (UP).—This town's 13,000 inhabitants and the U. S. Naval Academy's 3,000 midshipmen were, to quote any number of them, "ticked to death" today that the Army-Navy football game had been transferred from Philadelphia to Thompson Stadium here.

In the pleased category was Mayor William W. McCready, who said city authorities would do everything possible to effectuate President Roosevelt's order that "outsiders" be barred.

Academy officials were up to their necks in plans for the game and refused to say whether they were pleased or displeased by the shift. The more youthful officers, however, especially those who wouldn't have been able to get leave to Philadelphia, were plainly delighted that the game had been moved to their "back yard."

In past years many townspeople

the Roundup

Jack Jacobs, brilliant Indian halfback of the Cleveland Rams' professional football team in the National League, has been ordered to report for induction into the Army air corps at Oklahoma City on Nov. 18, it was announced today.

Jacobs enlisted several months ago. Since joining the Rams early in September, he has been among the leaders of the circuit in punting and passing.

Stanley (Bucky) Harris, former manager of the Washington Senators, has filed an application for the Army specialists' corps.

Harris said that if he is accepted, he hopes to be assigned to duty in the physical recreation program of the signal corps.

The former "boy-wonder" manager, who resigned his Washington job recently, said: "I haven't been approached by any other club."

The list of possible appointees for general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers was one less today following an announcement by George Weiss, general manager of the New York Yankees' farm system that he was "sticking" with the American leaguers.

"My contract with the Yankees is far from ended," he said, "in fact it still has two years to go. I doubt whether I'll be switching jobs for a while."

The season's top individual football performances as compiled by the American football statistical bureau:

Longest run from scrimmage—54 yards by Bob Ewing of Drake against Iowa State.

Longest pass completion—72 yards by Bob Carroll of Boston U. against Boston College.

Longest run back of intercepted pass—100 yards by Jack Wink of Wisconsin against Great Lakes.

Longest kick-off return—100 yards by Lyle Sturdy of Wichita against Washington U.

Longest punt return—82 yards by Jim Devar of Indiana against Butler and by Gerald Hightower of the Georgia Naval Cadets against Duke.

The war comes first before anything else, the Canadian Government said yesterday in ruling that all hockey players who are working in war jobs will not be allowed to leave their positions to play in the National Hockey League.

The ruling was made in specific regard to two players, Stuart Smith of the Montreal Canadiens and Pat Egan, defenseman of the Detroit Red Wings, who are presently working as skilled machinists in Canadian war plants.

the Low Down - With No Baseball to Distract Us We Pick the Football Winners

NAT LOW

Picking the Saturday football winners was a much harder task weeks ago than it is today. . . . Then one still had his thoughts riveted on the baseball and the world series. . . . It was the sound of bat and ball against the boot of the pigskin. . . . and personally we preferred the former.

But now the football situation has become clearer. . . . we are more or less familiar with most of the topnotch outfits in the collegiate ranks. . . . So, there is less excuse for not being able to pad our average a bit.

In two weeks of forecasting we have gotten 23 right and 8 wrong. . . . A little bit of arithmetic shows that our percentage is 74.1. . . . Shall we point out that the TOP man of the DAILY NEWS, for instance, has only .578?

Now let's wade into this week's package of grid magic. . . . Top game of the day is the one which brings together Notre Dame and unbeaten Illinois. You have read all about that terrific job the Irish did on the Iowa Naval Cadets last week. . . . You have probably read less about Illinois which has yet to be beaten. . . . The Irish started this season badly. . . . Angelo Bertelli was supposed to have been the big gun in their attack. . . . But with the duties of calling signals thrust upon him the kid could concentrate upon passing and running. Two weeks ago he was relieved of the quarter-backing duties and the result was sensational. . . . Notre Dame whipped Stanford and Iowa Naval in succession. . . . They unrelentingly combined running and passing game. With Bertelli and Corwin Clatt doing most of the running, Notre Dame started rolling.

Illinois has taken your straight, but the only substantial victory was the one over Minnesota which is not what it once was. . . . With the Irish clicking after a slow start and Illinois yet undefeated and probably untested, the edge goes to the Irish.

NOTRE DAME.

Manhattan-Duquesne here is the city. . . . We have seen the Jaspers over a period of years. . . . The vary but slightly, always a good team with a tough schedule. . . . This year the Jaspers are younger than usual with pretty fair potentialities, but as usual overscheduled. . . . Duquesne suffered its first loss in close to two years last week and will be out to regain their lost prestige. . . . DUQUESNE.

Army-Harvard. . . . Ah, our favorite team, the Cadets. . . . We saw them rip Columbia last week and came away raving at their power, speed and deception. . . . They are undefeated but perhaps untested. . . . Columbia certainly wasn't the toughest kind of opposition. . . . The Cadets will win this one but we are very much interested in seeing if they will roll up a score on the wily men of Dick Harlow who always comes up with a surprise. . . . ARMY.

Pittsburgh-Duke. . . . Duke, last year's Bowl team, was a push-over until they went to work on Colgate Saturday by 40-0. . . . They weren't using rabbit's feet either. . . . Pitt has never been the same since the "de-emphasis" firing of Jack Sutherland. . . . DUKE.

Great Lakes-Michigan State. . . . The Service boys can't hit that line and the State line is not much. . . . GREAT LAKES.

North Carolina-Tulane. . . . Carolina has a rushing team composed of youngsters. . . . Last week they upended unbeaten Duquesne. . . . In the process they gained 225 yards on the ground. . . . Tulane may be the favorite but we will stick by the youngsters from the Carolinas. . . . NORTH CAROLINA.

Syracuse-Cornell. . . . Syracuse is undefeated but not against a tough schedule so far. . . . Cornell will test them to the limit. . . . IT will be SYRACUSE too easy. . . .

Wisconsin-Purdue. . . . Wisconsin is big fast and strong. The Boiler-makers look at the seams. . . . WISCONSIN.

Brown-Princeton. . . . This is a good game, the Tigers have beaten Navy and last week tied mighty Penn in the rain. . . . Brown has a victory over the Lions and two very good backs in Don Savage and Hank Margarita. . . . This can go either way with Princeton, the defensive team, being nosed out by the Brownie speedboys. . . .

Penn State-Colgate. . . . Colgate will be rushed off their feet by PENN STATE.

Penn-Columbia. . . . Ah, the poor Lion. . . . Or should we say, poor General? That tie with Princeton last week was strictly a mistake for Penn. . . . They will take it out on the Lion's hide. . . . PENN.

Ohio State-Northwestern. . . . Very very easy for OHIO STATE.

Professor in Army Uniform
Indicts Appeaser Elements
Who Drove Him from Campus

By SENDER GARLIN

A DRAMATIC communication arrived in today's mail. Together with it came the information that Prof. Charles Lightbody, summarily fired from St. Lawrence University in Canton, N. Y., is now in uniform at Camp Upton.

Hence, while the fight to get Prof. Lightbody reinstated has lost its immediate practical aspect, the issues behind the dismissal still have to be fought through.

Prof. Lightbody was a popular and respected teacher at St. Lawrence for 12 years. He was fired by President Millard H. Jencks without a hearing. Meanwhile an Alumni Committee was formed with many graduates now in the armed services of the U.S. to carry on the fight against his dismissal.

The chief defender of the Trustees is Prof. Albert B. Corey, head of the Department of History and Government in which Prof. Lightbody had served. Corey applauded the Munich betrayal and in a speech last November defended old-time America Firsters like Lindbergh, Wheeler and Nye.

On the eve of his departure for Camp Upton Prof. Lightbody made a radio speech from station WLSB, Ogdensburg. The talk was sponsored by the Alumni Committee of St. Lawrence.

The dismissed teacher in his broadcast summed up the case against the college authorities with cogency and eloquence. I therefore want to quote some excerpts.

"We are fighting for the preservation of the democratic tradition in American life. And some of our most dangerous enemies are active within rather than without our country.

"With regard to St. Lawrence University, the 'business-as-usual' mentality is reflected in the cold shoulder given to the student war council by the university authorities last year. America Firstism is known to have existed in the Board of Trustees.

"There are... indications of a lack of vigilance in guarding against the propaganda of Nazi Germany. St. Lawrence maintained a German exchange student arrangement as long as possible, after many other institutions had given it up; the arrangement gave German student representatives a free rein on the campus, and allowed our students to come back from Germany thoroughly inoculated with the fascist virus. The dangerous results of this system are well seen in the recent trial and conviction of the German exchange student Karl Bahr. Ina Gotthelf, German exchange student at St. Lawrence, remained in this country for a number of years, securing visas with the aid of university authorities; her Nazi propaganda work among wealthy Americans in recent years has repeatedly attracted the attention of the FBI.

"St. Lawrence is in a strategic position on an invasion highway to the heart of our continent; near to the great aluminum plant, one of the most important defense works in the country and high on the Nazi sabotage list. So large an amount of subversive activity there cannot but be extremely disquieting to the strongly patriotic people of the North Country, especially in view of some other questionable activities in the region, with which the goings on at the university may well be linked.

"Another significant link between my dismissal and reactionary forces in the region is to be found in a certain mistrust of official and reactionary political 'big shot,' seeking to force the cancellation of an invitation to me to speak early in May at an American Legion meeting at Gouverneur, said that 'Jencks plans to dismiss him from the university.' At that time no such information was at all current at the university, yet this official and machine politician had 'inside the information.' It is profoundly significant that my troubles at the university began when, and only when my activities on behalf of the farmers commenced.

"The very fact that no charges have been made against me and that, according to a prominent member of the Board, they have no charges, indicates that they are conceding their real motives and do not or dare not bring it out because it is a motive of political prejudice the disclosure of which would make clear their denial of academic freedom. Reaction has taken the offensive on the campus and an obvious attempt is being made to crowd and intimidate or 'purge' the more progressive younger men on the faculty. One hardly need ask what the effect will be on the quality of instruction given and on the reputation of the college should the faculty be reduced to a group of servile henchmen.

"But the inevitable victory in the wider battle will carry us to victory in our local sector also. We shall win through in the end though the road be long and hard."

Who Delays Action?

A GREAT service is done all the United Nations by the frank discussion of the second front by Vladimir Krushkov, secretary of the Soviet Information Bureau. By openly and bluntly discussing the obstacles which stand in the way of the second front, he has helped to clarify the issues and render them easier of solution.

What he says has been a matter of public knowledge for some time and confirms the often expressed opinions of the people's leaders and spokesmen in England and America. The great popular second front movements have hit out incessantly at the "Munich Party" and defeatists in both countries, at those groups represented in England by Lady Astor and in America by McCormick, Hearst and Coughlin. They have charged these people with attempting to prevent the fulfillment of the agreement to open the second front in 1942 for the purpose of avoiding a defeat for Hitler and a victory by the United Nations shared by the Soviet Union.

The people's leaders and spokesmen have also exposed and hit out at the win-by-air-alone theorists, like Severson, whose main purpose is to delay if not prevent entirely a real land front against Hitler in Europe.

Nor has there been any hesitation especially in England to criticize and expose that group of diehards whose main concern is to safeguard the far-flung empire and who therefore subordinate to this interest the safeguarding of England and all the United Nations through the opening of the second front in Europe. And in this country, there has been no lack of criticism of a similar, although not identical, group which has pushed to the forefront their class aspirations for new empire particularly in the Far East and has attempted to switch our strategy from fighting Hitler to concentrating upon Japan.

The people have also seen through the arguments of hesitant and wavering elements, afraid of risks, who have put forth a whole series of specious arguments against the second front, such as lack of shipping and military unpreparedness.

That is what the people have been saying through the speeches of their spokesmen and in their innumerable meetings and resolutions urging the opening of the second front now. The continued criminal delay, giving way before the pressure of the defeatist and Munichite groups and influences, has still further aroused the people who want the immediate forging and fulfillment of that unified strategy which alone can bring about a crushing defeat of Hitler and the Axis.

Not words, but deeds; not armchair admiration of the great Soviet defense, but unified action with the heroic Red Army to defeat Hitler. This is what all the peoples want. This is what has been pledged in the Churchill-Molotov-Roosevelt pact to open the second front in Europe in 1942. Nothing short of this can meet the urgent needs of the hour and satisfy the requirements of national safety and victory. Labor and the people cannot and will not rest in pressing for the immediate opening of the second front.

The Navy Meets Labor

THE two-day management-labor conference at Washington arranged by the Navy, is an important event in the development of the government's labor relations policy. There is good reason to expect that results will record it as a milestone in the advance of our Navy.

In line with its August announcement, the Navy Department arranged to bring together the managements of its yards and representatives of labor organizations—workers on the job—to inaugurate a closer and more satisfactory relationship under which production could be speeded and friction eliminated. This, at long last, brings the Navy more fully into line with the government's labor policy generally. This will go a long way to raise morale and win the worker for a maximum effort.

Similar gatherings, national and local, should be held periodically. The Navy will find that it can learn much from the men and women in overalls when it comes to speeding ships to battle areas. The over-alled men and women are equally anxious to understand the Navy's problems.

The Navy's conference is another demonstration of the ever-growing realization that labor, through its organizations, must be integrated in every government war agency. But let us not overlook those whose opposition to labor knows neither bounds nor national emergencies—the likes of Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, Chairman of the Maritime Commission or Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, the Navy's chief of the Bureau of Docks. The former tells an audience that labor organizers ought to be "shot at sunrise," while the latter tells a labor convention that "we can do without labor organizations."

As long as the government permits the Lands and Moreells to spout out such a disruptive policy we will not have that mutual confidence so necessary to put the Navy's labor relations policy on a real and firm basis. It is all well and good for the Office of War Information to inform Land that he violated an executive order in failing to submit his "shot at sunrise" speech for approval. We can't imagine that he would receive an OK for such stuff. But the fact remains that there are people in high war posts, such as Land, who hold views that come closer to Hitler's than those of our Commander-in-Chief. Labor unions rightfully declare that such men have no place in the conduct of a people's war and should be removed.

The POLITICAL SCENE

Gov. Stassen's Dilemma

By Milton Howard

YOUNG Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota is the center of some of the most active political maneuvering in the Middle West.

Strong winds are tugging at the capital state house in St. Paul. On their billows ride such national figures as Senator Taft, going in one direction, and Wendell Willkie, going in the opposite direction. Both Taft and Willkie visited this city only last week.

It involves the political future of Governor Stassen and the pro-Willkie Republican in this state.

The "Old Guard" Republicans headed by Taft's henchmen, are determined to get rid of Stassen. The young Governor was elected as the man who would save the state from the trade unions; the Old Guard had high hopes for him. But the outbreak of the war changed matters.

Stassen began to move away from the pro-fascist isolationism of the Taft-Hoover faction. That Stassen had served this group prior to the war made no difference. As one who was suspicious of the Laval-type viewpoint inside the Republican Party, Stassen was marked for destruction. With him as a target of the pro-Hoover forces in this state, stands Stassen's appointee, and candidate for re-election, Senator Joseph A. Ball.

To some eyes in the labor movement here, still blinded by prejudices and sentiments which belong to the past, Stassen and Ball appear as undifferentiated from the reactionary-appeaser bloc in the Republican Party.

But the Quislings who see the Republican Party as the political instrument for national betrayal via a negotiated peace are not acting on this basis at all. They are out to "get" Stassen, and they hope—at least Senator Taft does—to woo Ball into their camp.

To readers in the East, this will come perhaps as news, since Stassen has been publicized widely as something of a young hopeful of extreme reaction.

This view may be fortified by the publication, this week in Life Magazine, of the abortive article which almost satistically dwells on the "class battles" of the past in which labor, presumably, "got properly handed." Appearing at a time when it is necessary for the trade unions to move ahead to new position in the political life of the state, this piece of journalism only gives an advantage to the Quislings in the state.

It is one of the ironies of the situation—and yet it was inevitable—that Stassen and Ball are beginning to get the standard treatment read out to all opponents of the Chicago Tribune influence in the Republican Party. Stassen and Ball are being labelled as "new dealers." This is but a short step from calling them "communists" which is synonymous with "new dealer" in the lexicon of the Quislings anyway.

The "Old Guard" calls Stassen a "communist" while Life Magazine lauds him with a burst of reactionary nostalgia for the "old days." This ambiguity—and this is the point of the election situation here—does not exist only in the confusion of Life Magazine's hackwork. It also exists in political reality as well.

FOR, although the enemies of Stassen and Ball give them no mercy, it cannot be said that they are, thus far, returning the fire with equal vigor.

Stassen, it is true, recently spoke for a world alliance that will include the Soviet Union. Ball has supported the President in the fight against the "farm bloc" and has denounced negotiated peace notions.

But in the current election fight this is not enough to counterbalance the dangerous coalition of pro-Hoover Republicans and pro-Lindbergh "farmer-laborites" which is rapidly uniting behind the crafty and ambitious demagogue who bears the Farmer-Labor nomination for governor Hjalmar Petersen.

Stassen and Ball's opponents are crossing party lines with an abandon, and with a disregard for old alignments, which could well be followed by their opponents. The man who challenged Stassen in the primaries for the gubernatorial nomination, Martin Nelson, has formed a practical alliance with the "farmer-labor" candidate, the appeaser Petersen by filing against Senator Ball as an "independent." Elmer Benson, the Farmer-Labor candidate for Senator who has incorporated the Second Front in his platform, is in this race too.

Petersen has become the coalition candidate of the appeasers and negotiated peace forces. He must be met by a counter-coalition.

The central tactic of the anti-Stassen move is to keep the war issue out of the elections.

Stassen is weakest on his domestic record, as he can be strongest on his war stand. Therefore, the Petersen-Nelson group concentrates on the state local issues. This places Stassen on the defensive.

But Stassen leaves the advantage to his opponent—at least thus far—by going easy on the main questions of the war—the fight against defeatism, and the Second Front.

Some of Stassen's advisers, it is said, counsel him to straddle the war issues, and thus "offend" the few voters. So long as this view prevails, Petersen, Stassen's American First opponent, is permitted to escape attack where he is glaringly weak—that is, his support for Lindbergh, America First, and his apologies for Hitler. Stassen's hesitations also still permit Petersen to curry favor with labor and farm groups on the basis of empty party labels.

The labor movement is not falling for the Petersen bait. But it adds to the difficulties of those in the trade unions who wish to defeat the Quislings, when Stassen and Ball hesitate to raise the proper banner, boldly and high.

Stassen still has the opportunity to end all the complexities of his "dilemma." He need but champion the total defeat of the nation's enemies, and the routing of the enemy within.

British Writer in Moscow Writes Home: "Are We Really Allies?"

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Paul Winter-son, Moscow correspondent of the London News Chronicle, told the readers of his paper recently that "happily" the Russian people are not reading the new journal, "British Ally," published by the British Ministry of Information in the Soviet Union.

After describing the situation the people of Moscow face this winter, Winter-son writes:

"Into this atmosphere of suffering and grim foreboding the British Ministry of Information has recently seen fit to introduce a weekly propaganda journal called the Britanski Soyuznik, or British Ally."

"Its aim is to put Britain across. It is an expensive, even flamboyant, production by Russian standards, and technically excellent—a luxury journal printed on better paper than any I have yet seen in Russia. It goes in considerable numbers to commanders at the front, who are very conscious of the aesthetic appearance of their own front newspaper by comparison."

NOT HAPPY START

"On page one of the copy I have in front of me there is a big headline. 'Attack the Enemy Everywhere.' As Red Army men know very well that by comparison with their own efforts we are not attacking the enemy anywhere, this naturally is not a very happy start."

"There is also a picture on the front page of Trafalgar Square with the caption, 'The Lovelies'

Square in London.' It looks as though a bomb never dropped within a hundred miles of it.

"The centre pages have some nostalgic British landscapes captioned 'Our Country,' which would be splendid if the 'British Ally' were a guide to Russian tourists in a post-war Britain. A fine stretch of Cornish coast, a quiet rural church, with lots of fat cows grazing peacefully in the foreground, a charming old village unmarred by war."

RED ARMY BITTER

"These pictures made me homesick, but they make the Red Army men gnash their teeth. The Russians have beautiful country, too, but it has been raped by barbarians. Its old buildings have been smashed, its homes have been burned, its churches have been desecrated, and its fat cattle have been driven off to feed the lavader."

"Is it any wonder the Red Army is bitter? Does the Ministry of Information really think it is doing anyone any good by showing the Russians how nice and cozy everything is at home?"

"Then there's an article about Britain's sea power. Now the Russians have a great respect for the British Navy, but they are tired of hearing how strong we are, and I do not blame them. They want evidence of our strength in action. So that article does not cut much ice either."

"There is an article about the R.A.F., for which the Russians also have great respect, but the headline, 'The Secret of Our Successes,' is not going to ring a bell at Stalingrad, where Russian soldiers, stained with battle and grey with fatigue, are being blitzed almost hourly by Nazi bomber and fighter forces which they think ought to be engaged in the West."

"Please don't think all this is much ado about nothing. It isn't. There was never a time when it was more necessary for Britain and America to try to put themselves in Russia's place, and in my considered view this complacent, selfish propaganda which shows no spark of understanding of the Russian psychology or mood has already done incalculable harm."

"Happily, this journal, 'British Ally,' is not reaching the Russian people as a whole. But it is reaching the Red Army and the view of the Red Army is summed up in the caustic comment of one of our officers after reading it—'Where does the 'Ally' come in?'"

"It may take years to eradicate the bitterness of the fighting men who survive the holocaust on the Eastern Front. Why add to those years by this incredible demonstration of British insularity and egotism and apparent lack of real sympathy with a people which for 15 months has fought almost alone one of the most gallant fights against oppression ever known in the annals of mankind's forward march?"

The Soviet writer's naming of Lady Astor as one of the leaders of the British Munich set, drew from the lady in question the remark: "Perfectly scandalous." We agree—she's that, too.

It seems that every time Lady Astor opens her mouth she puts her umbrella in it.

New twist on an old joke: "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" "That was no lady. That was a Lady."

All kinds of amendments have been proposed to water down the 18-19 draft bill. Among amendments which can be expected along the same line: 18 and 19-year-old draftees not to be permitted to handle firearms until they are 31; not to be sent abroad until the war is over.

Hitler would like nothing better than to see this country discuss the closing down of the saloons instead of the opening up of a Second Front.

Point of Order is fully behind the movement for Prohibition—of Heast, McCormick, Ham Fish and the professional "Drys."

A Historic Victory

The vote for the Anti-Poll Tax Bill in the House of Representatives is hailed as a "historic victory" by Midwest Labor, Duluth, Minneapolis, in an Oct. 18 editorial. We quote, in part:

A HISTORIC VICTORY

A historic victory in the war to destroy fascism was won on Wednesday, Oct. 14. Not on a battlefield, but in the halls of the U. S. House of Representatives. On that day, the shameful Southern poll tax was overwhelmingly defeated, and now awaits action of the U. S. Senate to be buried forever.

Ten million people in eight Southern States who have been deprived of the right to vote are nearer the day when they will become full-fledged citizens of the United States. . . .

But the battle to give citizenship to 10,000,000 people in the South is not over. . . . It is necessary that U. S. Senators be contacted immediately to fight for . . . the bill. . . .

Letters From Our Readers

What Coudert Would Like Voters to Forget

New York, N. Y.

Editor, Daily Worker:

The Herald Tribune recently carried a letter of Frederic R. Coudert, Sr., defending his son's "record of loyalty" and deprecating "absurd falsehoods" against him.

But it is on the record and common knowledge that the firm of Coudert Brothers has financial ties with fascist Italy. And can anyone deny these days that Pierre Laval's swastika is not showing?

Armed with this knowledge can any right-thinking citizen cast his vote for Coudert, Jr.? A. G. D.

Keeping the Wires Warm to Beat the Poll Tax

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Editor, Daily Worker:

The other day I got quite a few signatures to a wire to Senator O'Mahoney demanding the release for vote and passage of anti-poll tax legislation.

We need greater pressure, a more vigorous campaign to guarantee passage of this bill. We should direct the greatest pressure possible on the Judiciary Committee and our Senators. Keep up the fight and discussion. A PITTSBURGHER.
